New York State Museum: A Spirit of Sacrifice: New York State in the First World War

The New York State Museum will open “A Spirit of Sacrifice: New York State in the First World War” this Saturday, April 15. On display through June 3, 2018, the exhibition explores New York's pivotal role in World War I and features artifacts, images, posters, and documents from the collections of the State Museum, State Archives, State Library, and cultural institutions from across the state.

The exhibition is organized into six distinct areas covering New York's participation in the war both at home and on the warfront, and features a life-size recreation of a trench on the Western Front. In addition, the Museum will offer an online exhibition featuring an interactive World War I timeline and a teacher's guide (to be launched later this spring) and an exhibition catalogue (to be published by SUNY Press in December 2017).

New York State and its citizens played a critical role in the United States' efforts during World War I. By the end of the war, the Empire State would lead in the number of soldiers, tonnage of supplies, and money raised to support America's efforts.

The public is invited to attend an opening reception for A Spirit of Sacrifice on Sunday, April 23 from 1:00 - 3:00 p.m. The program includes a reception with light refreshments at 1:00 p.m., followed by a guided tour of the exhibition at 2:00 p.m.

Unclear if Governor's Service Sharing Plan Can Save Counties Money

"It's a good opportunity for you to share what you've been doing," said Assemblyman John McDonald (D - Cohoes). "As a former mayor, I know how much they've worked to share services."

Cuomo has long sought to reduce the cost and scope of local governments, which he claims is a top driver of property taxes in the state.

"I think the important thing is the discussion about dissolution of governments is gone," McDonald said. "It's more about finding where can we use technologies and resources to help governments become more efficient."

Local school officials react to state aid after budget passes

Assemblyman John McDonald III, D-Cohoes, said in a weekend email to constituents that the 4 percent overall aid increase reaffirms the Assembly majority’s “unrelenting commitment to putting every student on their path to success.”

“There is no better investment in our children than in education,” he continued. “By giving our schools the funding and resources they need, we can protect vital education programs and help our kids learn, grow and get ahead.”
