Working To Make Our Subways Safe Again

Whether you're taking the subway to work, visiting family, or picking up groceries, you shouldn't feel like your life is in danger. Many New Yorkers, however, feel less safe on our city's subways than they ever have before. Thankfully, Alec has a plan that would clean up our public transportation and make it safer for riders:

- Set aside $100 million in grants to enhance safety infrastructure at public transit facilities throughout the state, with 50% of the funds made available to New York City. (A.10916)
- Protect individuals who intervene in emergencies to save lives from legal consequences, as long as their actions are reasonable, proportional, and in good faith. (A.4968)
- Allow retired law enforcement officers to serve as transit security marshals appointed by local law enforcement or a public transit agency. (A.11054)
- Require violent felony offenses committed by 16- and 17-year-olds, including those committed on public transit, to be tried in Youth Part of Criminal Court rather than Family Court. (A.4705)
